

ABSTRACT

There is no doubt that knowing what a person's fate will lead to and what his outcome will be is dependent on the deeds he has performed so far, and the deeds he will perform until the hour of his death and his departure from the world of this world. Then, the correct self-evaluation of the deeds he has performed in the past of his life And correcting what needs to be corrected, in addition to a sincere determination to give the best for the remainder of his life, in addition to holding oneself accountable on an ongoing basis that would help a person reach the good outcome and eternal happiness with the help of God Almighty, and as Imam Ali (peace be upon him) said. ): "The reality of happiness is that a person ends his work with happiness, and the reality of misery is that a person ends his work with misery."

The study showed that doing good and doing evil are not equal in their consequences, as there is a difference between the good and good consequences, and the evil and bad consequences, in the situation and the outcome. The rational and thoughtful person is the one who prefers the good consequences over others, and the one who wants to be saved always looks at the consequences of things and their consequences before doing them and taking their path.
