The third section dealt with the Shaabani uprising in 1991 and the assassinations and liquidations that resulted from it. The title of the fourth chapter was the assassinations and political liquidations in Iraq (1994_1999) and it was divided into two sections, which dealt with the first section. The failed coup attempts from 1994 to 1999 and their impact on assassinations and political liquidations in Iraq. The second topic was entitled Liquidation of the Religious Elites in Iraq (1994_1999). This topic dealt with the religious figures who were assassinated, most notably Muhammad Sadiq al-Sadr in 1999 As mentioned above, we note that this period is considered one of the most violent periods in the modern and contemporary history of Iraq, as a very large number of political and military figures were assassinated. The religious side had a large share of assassinations as well, and we notice the emergence of security and repressive apparatuses during that period, and Saddam Hussein, his sons, brothers, and uncles took control of power.
